Dear [redacted]

STAT

STAT

Though some weeks have passed since my visit to [redacted] I nevertheless want to write to thank you for an interesting and agreeable day. Of course, you made me very jealous of your ability to provide ideal circumstances for training, but I guess I can survive that. During the course of some of our recent financial reviews, I discovered that we pay almost $2 million for "off-site" training--trying to provide the kinds of unobstructed training conditions which you have. If you ever hear of a small campus nearby, let me know.

I was pleased, too, to meet [redacted] whom I found quite impressive. I have run into him a couple of times since and found it helpful to have had the occasion to have chatted with him [redacted] I was impressed with Ted and hope he will make the list of your people who come to next year's Executive Seminar. I think our group will be an unusually good one.

Again, thanks for all the assistance--the transportation, lunch, and fascinating description of your courses.

With best personal regards.

Sincerely,

Stephen Low
